THE BEE THAT WAS NEVER HIVED.

But you'll have to hibe some day, said the man.

The girl shook her head.

It is the bee who escapes that abject swarming—gathers honey for itself and eats it—who sees life, she said, and like the spirit of the Hokusai, comes and goes at will across the summer fields.

And when night falls—what then? said the man.

The night, and the night perfumes, are even more glorious to it than those of the day.

And autumn and winter—how then; when all the other bees are warm, and hived and fed?

Warmth is not everything, nor comfort nor food. But travel, says one of Easterns, is riches. My bee may perish in an early frost, or blunder into a spider web, but even bees know that the gods die young; they don't want to grow old—nor do I. And just think what frolic that bee would have—in the long, long days and nights, he is certain to hap upon other truant bees who have thought for themselves, and declined to be uncouth units of those bronzed, convoluted masses, swarming over each other into—

You mean the hive of marriage, he said frowning, as she paused.

Have you ever read your "Line upon Line" carefully, she said. There was no one to square the press then, men were written down just as they were—and are. The East set the West the pattern of manhood then, and through the centuries East and West, have faltered very little up to the present time.

You know too much, he said with a strong distaste. The women of the last generation did not talk thus.

No they were first chloroformed by love, then scudily cudgeled into submission when they came to their senses, said the girl. Nowadays if a man wins a woman's respect, it is worth having because it is purely voluntary.

And how can he win it?

By earbing the lust of the eye—looking deeper than a dazle of pink and white skin—marking the meaning of a glance, not the color of it—studying the expression of a mouth, not its shape—and searching a heart, not for his own flattered image in it, but ideals pure as those once had, and lost, and now may find again—if he will.

But I thought you men were bad eggs from the beginning?

No it is your bringing up, the boundless license you are permitted from birth, that makes you what you are. And how you physically deteriorate. Look at our girls—straight, strong, often beautiful, and look at the brothers who start under the same conditions of health; it is the difference of the life they lead that stunts the one and perfects the other.

Then you demand a muff—an absolutely good man.

On the contrary we demand a man half bad and half good, who, aware that if he is wholly 'bad, no one will punish him, elects to stand by his better self, and the woman who loves him. Then you get self control, loyalty; and trust me, we women know how to reward him. For one human soul to help another up, not down. O! there's a fascination in it that all the excitement of tobogganing down precipices can never beat.

You might lead a man anywhere you liked, said the man, looking at her with eyes gloomy and thwarted in his handsome face.

Strip off my white and silver gown, she said, contemptuously, strip off my wretched pink and white body, and what do you find worth the having? Nothing. For a few brief years, just so long as my bloom, my youth lasts perhaps; but my heart, my intelligence will ripen, not fade, and when I find the man who will love me for those—

And don't I value them? Listen. It will grow upon you—this restlessness, this incapacity to submit yourself to love—you will become a moral vagabond, your inclination your only law, till at last you will find it impossible to tether yourself to one place.

Only a heart could do that. A man offers it to a woman, and gives her a home; his heart, his inclinations, walk out at the door to conquer fresh fields. He moved impatiently.

I don't see why. Have you so little faith in your power to bind your lover to you?

O, I could bind a woman, or a child, or any other human thing, but not a man. If I were, she hesitated, a plain woman—forgive my frankness—I might risk it. The man's eyes would be blind to my envelope, if the soul, the spirit of me, contented him. The only happy marriages I ever knew were made by remarkably ordinary women.

You think—

That the best looking, brightest women attract the worst order of men. They go on pursuing the type—not the woman; the man who will go on loving a woman in spite of, and not because of her beauty, is worthy of her love indeed. But he is incredibly rare.

Heroine, urged the man, you have everything—beauty and brains and heart; and if no man could ever be worthy of you, don't you know he would have sense to realize the treasure he possessed?

Till he possessed it. Yes, she said, and rose, laughing, from her seat in the winter garden; and the man rose too, an ugly look deforming his handsome features.

Some day you will be tired of wandering, and there will be no hive open to you, he said to himself savagely; but that time seemed far enough away as they entered the ball room, and she was at once surrounded and besieged by lovers.

What a beautiful voice that woman has, said a man who, sitting at a distance, had been able to catch the sound but not the sense of her conversation, though a phrase or two uttered by her companion had reached him.

Lord George, a gross man, with ears alert for supper, grunted and named her, but without enthusiasm.

Women of Lady Hermione's sort, and their voices had no attractions for him; his tastes were much more easily satisfied by a first-class chef, and neither of the two men had sought, or would have been at home in the ball room, but as guests staying in the house, they escaped from the racket to the shadow of the palms.

A cessation of the music, a quickening, a hurrying of sound in the distance drew the stout man alertly out of his chair and he offered his arm to the other.

Supper, he said.

None for me. If not too much trouble, you'll come for me later—or send my man.

Of course.

The man who was left, listened to the greedy footsteps retreating, then lay back with closed eyes, thinking.

His was a strong, lean face, square jawed, that would have been grim but for the melancholy, hard fought, but finally submitted to as a habit, that softened it. There is many a tough lesson learned in that silent endurance, but it is mostly physical, not mental suffering that teaches it.

A girl came softly, swiftly in, taking the vacant chair before she realized that the one next to it was occupied. She sprang up, vexed, but the man's eyes suddenly opened and the sadness in them, or perhaps their very indifference, so unlike the quickening of most men's gaze at sight of her, stayed her steps.

I thought everyone was at supper.

He knew her voice at once, and leaned forward eagerly. They talked of trifles at first, and each moment his pleasure grew. Here was one of the oases set far in the dusty desert of life, that mightily refreshed thirsty souls and bodies, giving them strength to continue their long caravan march, and in the long hour that followed, the blithe man and Hermione came to an understanding of each other, got a grip of one another's characters, that with her beauty made visible, and mentally obscuring his judgment, they never could have done.

The only interruption came when a long-nosed, reproachful young man appeared around the corner, murmuring: I've been waiting outside that door all this time Lady Hermione—you said you were having your dress mended—and—his glance added, meanly gave me the slip.

Go to supper dear boy, she said; I'm busy; and he went, and she breathed freely. For it quickened her pulses to know that at last, all to herself, she had the man whose eyes showed no trace of blindness, yet who had been struck down by it in the height of the success of his crowded worldly and intellectual life; and now the strenuous, the worldly, the ambitious side of it was over, and only the intellectual, the inner one remained, and into it he had drawn her for this one full, full hour.

A man's voice sounded on the other side of their retreat, a voice thickened by wine, and Humphrey Fletcher thought: That is the man who wanted to hibe the bee and failed.

I wonder where that poor devil, Fletcher, has hidden himself, went on the man on the other side of the orange tree; the best judge in the world of women's looks and suddenly smitten blind! Even Lady Hermione would be no better to him now than an ill-favored servant wench.

O! he must know it—he must feel it, if she were anywhere near him, said a woman's impatient voice. She is like her opals, milky with a heart of fire—and has but to show herself, rainbow like, in a room and the rest of us are not even visible.

And yet, said Humphrey, almost under his breath, but she heard; when you see her mind, her face must needs be forgot.

She trembled, loving him for his misfortune. And in that moment, tho' she knew it not till later, the bee was safely hived at last.

A New York murder—mystery was cleared up after 33 years.

POSTMASTERS may contribute to campaign funds. They must not, however, seek to be elected delegates to political conventions; neither must they become active members of political campaign committees. This is the gist of an order which was issued by Acting Postmaster General Winne. It expresses tersely the attitude of the Roosevelt administration on a question that has engaged the serious attention of civil service reformers for twenty years. Hereafter postmasters who may undertake to interfere in factional politics or who will identify themselves publicly with party machinery will be liable to dismissal for violation of the civil service laws. They may contribute cash to campaign funds. They may dedicate their salaries in full for the furtherance of a political cause, but they must not show that pernicious activity in politics that some of them have heretofore evinced. All of which is the veriest poppycock. Postmasters will continue to run the machine as much as in their power and nothing will be said about it provided they work for Roosevelt.

CAPT. THOMAS A. RICHARDS, proprietor of the Clemens House, at Danville, is out for the position of superintendent of the Confederate Veterans Home to be established in Kentucky soon. Captain Richards is himself a Confederate Veteran with a splendid war record. He is a true blue Democrat, always to be found in the forefront of any battle for the party's good, and besides is a typical Southern gentleman of the old school, embodying all the finer qualities which place our men among the foremost. He numbers his friends by legions, all of whom hope that he will be successful in securing the position which he seeks. An old resident of Stanford and a former postmaster, Captain Richards is especially popular in Lincoln county and has the best wishes of all.

AT Harrodsburg yesterday in a joint debate between Judge M. C. Saulley and Hon. Robert Harding the former gentleman asked the latter if it were true that he declined to vote for Mr. Goebel for governor. When he answered in the affirmative and explained his reasons the crowd yelled loudly for Judge Saulley. It was Saulley day at Harrodsburg yesterday beyond doubt.

A REMARKABLE instance of length of public service is furnished by Judge B. R. Butler, of Tennessee, who died last week at the age of 74. Fifty-seven of those years were spent in public office in army, county, State and National legislative halls. Like that other distinguished East Tennessean, Andrew Johnson, he began life as a tailor.

IT IS SAID that the Republican campaigners will have a large ball 20 feet in diameter constructed which they will roll across the State of Pennsylvania from Philadelphia to Erie. While they are engaged in this idiotic business of "Keeping the balls rolling," the Democrats will be at the better business of getting votes for Patterson.

KENTUCKY has the greatest number of persons to the square mile of any State South of the Ohio river, and no State West of the Mississippi equals it. Its average density, 53.1, is more than twice that of the country at large. Leslie is the most sparsely settled county, having only 17 to the mile. Mercer has 60.

In a speech at a banquet in Manila the other night, Gov. Taft declared that the United States would retain the islands indefinitely and the Americans were in the Philippines for the benefit of the Filipinos and without selfish purposes. He declared himself in favor of a gold standard of currency for the islands.

SPECIAL honor to the memory of William McKinley will be done at Buffalo, Sept. 14, which few can realize is the anniversary of his tragic death. His slayer has almost been forgotten in the short year, however, and few can now even spell his name.

GERMANY'S policy in excluding the importation of foreign—which really means American—meat and live stock, is being felt all over that country. The price of meat is advancing rapidly, a good steak costing in Berlin 44c a pound.

The men who composed the Taylor militia at the State capital in 1900 have filed a mandamus suit seeking to compel the Governor and Adjutant General to approve claims for their service.

From the amount of speech-making he has been doing in Vermont and New Hampshire, Roosevelt must be afraid that they won't go republican this fall, says the Lexington Democrat.

Attorney General Clifton J. Pratt has filed a mandamus suit in the Franklin Circuit Court seeking to compel Auditor Coulter to draw a warrant in his favor for $8,464.81, the amount representing the salary paid Judge R. J. Breckinridge during the period he held the office of Attorney General.

Auditor Coulter has prepared a letter to Gov. Beckham calling his attention to the enormous expense account certified from the Bell Circuit Court, amounting to $11,598.88 for a term of five weeks, a considerable sum over the entire revenue of the county. An inspector will be sent to make an investigation.

THE colored fair wound up in a free-for-all fight Saturday afternoon. Willie Hausford, a Stanford coon, accused a Lancaster Negro known as "Sporting Dan," of being too "obnoxious" on the grounds and the trouble began. For a few moments Bedlam reigned supreme, oaths, sticks and stones filled the air and a few pistols were flourished, but beyond the bouncing of a few rocks off the combatants' heads, no damage was done as Constable Peyton was promptly on the scene and arrested the parties.

LEAVING.—Messrs. Keegan and Wilson, who have been here for some months in the employ of the Central Oil, Gas and Mining Co., have shipped their drilling outfit to Floyd county, where they have been engaged to drill oil wells for a New York company under the management of Mr. A. P. Goodlog. Who served in a like capacity for the company first mentioned. The Lexington company has abandoned this field, only after an exhaustive search for oil, and in the endeavor have spent a pile of money. It is a source of regret that their efforts proved fruitless. Messrs. Gooding, Keegan and Wilson won many friends in Lincoln county, who regret their departure.

THE State Board of Election Commissioners met at Frankfort Saturday and named county election commissioners to serve during the ensuing year: For Lincoln, T. J. Hill, Sr., of Stanford, and B. B. King, of Moreland, were named to succeed J. M. Alverson and J. F. Rigney. Sheriff Baughman is ex-officio, a member and chairman of the committee. In Boyle the committee named W. C. Surber, of Junction City, and N. K. Tunis, of Danville. In Garrard the appointees were G. B. Swinebroad and W. McC. Johnson, both of Lancaster. In Casey, G. R. Wilkinson and E. H. Kidd, of Liberty, will serve, and in Rockcastle, John W. Brown, of Brodhead, and G. S. Griffin, of Mt. Vernon, were appointed.

THERE will be a called meeting of Stanford Chapter U. D. C. at Mrs. J. C. Hays' at three o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

THE Somerset Hop Club has extended an invitation to the Stanford organization to be present at its fair hop on next Thursday evening.

MACK WILLIAMS, Stanford's new photographer, has our thanks for a fine picture of our office building, which we will print for our readers before long.

MARSHAL R. G. JONES and Constable Cap Peyton deserve much credit for the prompt and fearless discharge of their duties during the Negro fair. They were kept busy as there were a number of "bad niggers" in town, but their energy and vigilance never flagged.

NEWS comes from Casey that the Liberty fair will declare a good dividend. President J. C. Coulter and Secretary G. R. Wilkinson have more than once proven that they know how to manage fairs and Casey will always have good ones while she keeps those gentlemen in office.

TO PRINTERS.—THE INTERIOR JOURNAL has a good newspaper outfit for sale. It includes a Cincinnati Cylinder press, two job presses, a Mann press large enough to print two pages of a seven-column paper and lots of job and body type. Will sell at a bargain if application is made at once.

COURT DAY DINNER.—The ladies of the Presbyterian church will serve dinner to the court day crowd next Monday, county court day, in the old Severance store room, opposite the court house. Only 25 cents will be charged and a splendid dinner will be served. The object of the enterprise is to raise funds for church repairs. Go and help a laudable cause.

J. W. POWELL was tried before Judge Bailey Friday afternoon and held in $250 bond for emptying the contents of a shot-gun at Harve Milton in Rowland a few nights since. Powell was unable to find a bondsman and the court allowed him to remain under the surveillance of Craig Camden, special guard. Powell accuses Milton of using insulting language toward his wife.

ALL of the schools in town opened for business yesterday morning, but on account of the inclement weather none were as largely attended as they will be before the week is out. At the College there were 22 pupils enrolled; at the Hill Academy 14, Mrs. Nannie Sandley's room 20, Mrs. Cochran's 23, Miss McKinney's 16, Miss Burch's 23, Miss Peyton's nine, Miss Lewis' 14.

THE old brick house on Lancaster street recently purchased by the Messrs. Nunnell from Miss Carrie Porter, has been torn down and the foundation laid for a handsome two-story structure which will take its place. The change will greatly improve the appearance of that street, but from the view-point of the antiquary it is sad to see the old building go. It is one of the few old landmarks that connects us with ancient history. Mrs. Barnes (the mother of Rev. G. O.) said that it had the appearance of maturity when she first came to the town, eight or ten to a century ago, and it has at different times been occupied as a home by a number of men prominently identified with the history of the town, among them being Messrs. S. H. Shanks, B. W. Dunn, Dr. W. E. Dalley and Jeremiah M. Smith, a distinguished lawyer who lived here before the war, and whose son is said to be the proto-type of one of the prominent characters in Mr. Allen's novel, "The Reign of Law."

CHURCH MATTERS.

Forty-hours prayer begins next Sunday at St. Joseph's church at Owensboro, at St. Brigid's church, Hickman, and at St. Patrick's, St. Albans.

All the organizations except the Primitive Methodists in New Zealand and the United Free Church of Scotland in Tonga, belong to the Methodist Church Union in Australia.

At the close of the first week there had been 28 additions to the church in the meeting now being conducted by Elders J. G. Livingston and B. J. Pinkerton at the Logan's Creek Chapel.

Rev. W. E. Arnold is attending conference at London. Mr. A. M. Pence and Miss Minnie Straub will go up later. Mr. Arnold told us that his church here and the one at Hubble gave $215 to benevolent purposes this year.

Of the 1,000 foreign delegates, from thirty-one nations, who attended the Young Men's Christian Association World's Congress at Christiania, Norway, last week, the United States sent thirty-eight official representatives.

NICE FARM FOR SALE.

I desire to sell my farm of 50 acres, just outside of the town limits. It is one of the prettiest homes around Stanford and is well improved with a handsome two-story dwelling. Has good kitchen and splendid, dry cellar. Fine water and electric lights furnished free. Most of the outside fencing is kept up by others. Very little fence to do. Splendid barn, a good cistern at door. Land in a good state of cultivation with most of it in grass. Good, roomy meat house, etc. Terms to suit purchaser. Call and see the place. J. S.
